Internationally-Recognized Speaker

John Rosemond is one of the few psychologists I've ever met who always makes sense.

-- Dr. Kevin Leman, Author, Have a New Kid by Friday

John Rosemond is the psychologist who I think has the most sense among those who write on raising children. He is a very, very wise man.

-- Dennis Prager, Nationally Syndicated Radio Host

John Rosemond is on a mission: To help America's parents claim loving leadership of their families, thus ensuring optimal success for themselves and optimal well-being for their children. Since 1971, John has worked as a family psychologist in various settings, including private practice from 1979 to 1991, when he began devoting himself exclusively to writing and public speaking.

To date, he has written 14 best-selling books on parenting and family life, including Parenting by The Book; and The Well-Behaved Child: Discipline that REALLY Works. His syndicated parenting column appears in more than 200 newspapers nationwide, including The Charlotte Observer, Miami Herald, Pittsburgh Post-Gazette, Hartford Courant, Omaha World-Herald, Atlanta Journal-Constitution, Raleigh News and Observer, San Diego Union Tribune, and Albuquerque Journal. His TV appearances include 20/20, Good Morning America, The View, The Today Show, and CNN.

In addition, John is one of America's busiest and most popular speakers. He's known for his sound advice, humor and easy, relaxed, engaging style.

Topics Derived from John's Parenting Best-Sellers

All presentations are customized to suit the unique needs of each client and the relevance to their audience groups.

Parenting by THE BOOK

Parenting by THE BOOK is Scripture-based parent education developed with the intent to equip parents with powerfully effective child-rearing skills. All of the information, materials, methods, and recommendations included in the curriculum are based on Scripture, supportive scientific research, and good, old-fashioned common sense.

Parenting the Strong-Willed Child

The so-called "strong-willed child"—oppositional, argumentative, assertively demanding—presents a unique challenge to his or her parents. The adjective is synonymous, after all, with "hard to discipline." In this enlightening and entertaining presentation, John outlines a virtually fail-safe formula for successful discipline of not only the child who is strong-willed, but any child.

Parenting with Love and Leadership

Children depend on parents for the two L-words of Love and Leadership. In this entertaining and thought-provoking talk, John tells parents how to deliver these two essential parenting ingredients in ways that strengthen children emotionally and help them grow into responsible, compassionate citizens.

The Well-Behaved Child

The keys to effective discipline are the "Three C's" of clear, authoritative communication, compelling consequences, and consistency. The key is to assign emotional and practical responsibility for a child's misbehavior to its rightful owner—the child. Included are unique tools for managing sibling rivalry, bedtime problems, disobedience, and public misbehavior.

Assuming the Power of Parenting

This popular 90-minute presentation is the "centerpiece" of John's presentation menu. While it stands alone, Assuming the Power of Parenthood can also be scheduled along with Parenting the Strong-Willed Child (see description below), making for a powerful and inspiring combination. When so combined, the two presentations should be titled Parenting the Strong-Willed Child—Part One and Parenting the Strong-Willed Child—Part Two.

In the 1960s and '70s, American parents embraced a new, psychological vision of children and child rearing. This new paradigm, which John calls "Postmodern Psychological Parenting," is the antithesis of the viewpoint that had guided American parents for hundreds of years. This 180 degree turn has proven enormously problematic to child, marriage, family, school, and culture. John asserts that many—nearly all, in fact—of today's parenting struggles are the result of parents who unwittingly adopt a parenting paradigm that does not work.

After clearly illustrating the difference between the traditional and modern points of view and demonstrating the failures of the latter, John outlines an equally clear solution: Parents need but conform their behavior to each of the "Three Seasons of Child Rearing" as they naturally and logically unfold over the term of a child's dependency. Attendees regularly use such terms as "uplifting," "liberating," and "empowering" to describe this powerful yet immensely entertaining presentation.

Teen-Proofing: Understanding & Managing Your Teenager

Today's parents approach the teen years with great anxiety and trepidation. These are the peer pressure years, the years during which the child begins to declare his or her independence and move toward emancipation. The problems that develop in the parent-teen relationship, says John, are usually due to parents who don't want to give the teen enough freedom and a teen who wants more freedom than he or she can handle. Is there a middle ground? Yes, there is, and John describes it in terms of a macro-management style that focuses on the "Six C's of Teen-Proofing": curfew, cash, car, conflict, consequences, and colleagues (a.k.a. co-conspirators). The parenting style that John provides all but insures that teens will take responsible control of their own destinies during the most significant years of their childhoods and approach emancipation with confidence and purpose. Footnote: This presentation, which is based on John's best-selling book of the same title, can also be delivered as a 3-hour mini-skillshop.

The Keys to Effective Discipline

More parents have problems with discipline than with any other single child rearing issue. For many parents, these problems begin during toddlerhood with tantrums, toilet training resistance, and defiance, and only get worse. This 90-minute presentation, which can be extended to a mini-workshop (3 hours), provides parents with the information and skills they need to begin making significant positive changes in their discipline style and therefore, their children's behavior.

The "Keys" to Effective Discipline are Commanding Communication, Compelling Consequences, and Confirming Consistency. John describes these as three legs of the disciplinary tripod and emphasizes that weakness in one of the legs will cause the entire structure to "wobble" if not collapse altogether. He shows parents, through example, how to communicate so as to "nip" misbehavior in the proverbial bud and/or "lower the boom" on misbehavior that has already grown to mammoth proportion. Finally, he provides parents with a concrete definition of consistency that makes practical sense.

As usual, John laces this talk with humor, and plenty of it! Parents are sure to leave feeling not only relieved of significant guilt and anxiety, but also inspired, informed, and ready to go home and become calm, self-confident leaders of children.

John has also developed a very important presentation specifically for parents with adopted children, single parents and blended families that frees those parents from the psychological bogeyman plaguing psychology and parenting advice today.
